Stellar scores, but still 'failures'

Palo Alto, Santa Clara County schools top in state, yet feds lump them in failing category

By [unreadable]

In a surprising report of public school test scores by the state Department of Education, Palo Alto and Santa Clara County schools were ranked among the top performers in the state. However, the federal government's latest report on school performance, released last month, placed Palo Alto and Santa Clara County schools in the "failing" category.

On the one hand, the state Department of Education reported that Palo Alto and Santa Clara County schools were ranked among the top performers in the state. However, the federal government's latest report on school performance, released last month, placed Palo Alto and Santa Clara County schools in the "failing" category.

Parents' report shows that while the state Department of Education ranked Palo Alto and Santa Clara County schools among the top performers in the state, the federal government's latest report on school performance, released last month, placed Palo Alto and Santa Clara County schools in the "failing" category.
